More and more Bay Area homeowners are turning to California native plants to make their gardens aesthetically pleasing, attractive to birds and butterflies, water-wise, and low maintenance. You are invited to visit home gardens landscaped with California native plants on this seventh annual tour.

A variety of gardens will be open for viewing, from townhomes to acre lots, from newly planted gardens to established ones. You won't have to go far to see one: these native gardens are located all over the Santa Clara Valley. Some will feature talks, others will have plants for sale. Visit as many as you like — for ideas, for photos, for inspiration.

Free admission • Registration required at www.GoingNativeGardenTour.org

Garden information, maps, and directions will be emailed to registrants the week of April 6. Web registrations will be accepted until noon of April 18 or until the tour reaches capacity, whichever comes first. For information, visit www.GoingNativeGardenTour.org, or email info@GoingNativeGardenTour.org.
